Elkhorn City -- Adventure where nature meets culture

Welcome to Elkhorn City. Elkhorn City sets at the mouth of the fabulous "Breaks of the Big Sandy" within 3 miles of the Breaks Interstate Park. In fact, Daniel Boone's first steps in Kentucky in 1767 were near Elkhorn City, in the potter flats area of the Breaks Park. A historical highway marker is located at Patty Loveless and East Elkhorn Street across from the Dollar General Store.

The small town of Elkhorn City has long been one of the best-kept secrets of the Appalachian Mountains. Lying at the confluence of the Russell Fork River and Elkhorn Creek between three mountains, its layout and scenic appeal has delighted countless travelers on their way to the breaks interstate park.

It is the home town of Patty Loveless the famous country music artist.

Artists Collaborative Theatre, (ACT) makes it home on Patty Loveless Drive. ACT is a year-round community theatre celebrating our local east Kentucky talent through quality performing arts programming: theatre, music, and dance. ACT also has an active Educational Arts Program for all ages.

Lighted walkways through downtown include a paved track along the river front, which also serves as a bird and duck sanctuary which is part of the Blue Line Trail, a downtown trail which is decorated with numerous art murals. The picturesque iron bridge spanning the Russell fork river that once routed carriages and early autos into the downtown area is the center piece of the trail.

The Railroad Museum, near the north end of the bridge, is a rare facility that celebrates and preserves Elkhorn City's early days as a railroad town. The museum, run entirely by volunteers and donations, has been lauded in news features across the Appalachian region as a must-see. Both railroad enthusiasts and tourists enjoy this public treasure.

Elkhorn City hosts many festivals each year. Among them is the apple Blossom festival in May, the Fourth of July celebration, and Christmas in the City. The Apple Blossom Festival attracts visitors from throughout the region for crafts, music, rides, and tours. The Fourth of July celebration named "Fourth on the fork" brings residents together for fun on the Elkhorn City beach along the Russell fork river. From the riverside, a fantastic fireworks display may be viewed as it emanates from high on one of hills overlooking town.

Year round white water paddlers come from all over the country to challenge the 200 feet per mile descent of the Russell fork gorge. In October, rafters come to take on the gorge. Visitors and enthusiasts hike into the gorge that splits the breaks interstate park and the pine mountain range to witness the skill and tenacity of those accepting the challenge.

1776 Trans American bicycle trail travels through Elkhorn City along highway 80 and West Russell Street. Hundreds of bicyclist uses this trail to travel across the United States during the summer months.

Elkhorn City's newest attraction is the Pine Mountain Trail, a purposed linear state park and hiking and horseback riding trail that will begin in Elkhorn City and follow the crest of Pine Mountain 120 miles to Jellico Tennessee. The Trail head is past City Hall on Carson Island Road past the Blue Hole Pay lake.

Blue Hole Pay Lake and Campground is located on Carson Island toward the eastern end of the City near City hall. The pine mountain trail's northern trail end is also located on Carson Island near the pay lake.

There are numerous Kentucky highway historical makers in town that show the unique history of the area. The William Ramey marker is located at the caboose at the corner of Patty loveless and Russell streets. The Richard potter marker is located across from City hall on highway 80 going toward the breaks. Richard Potters sons all road with the confederate Kentucky 10th cal very, trembles Yankee chasers and had numerous run with the union 39th while home on leave in the area. The Elkhorn City's Railroads marker is located at the railroad museum on Pine Street near Main Street.
